Goals

Promoting volunteering and possible future job engagement in people in risk

- Addictions
- Prison inmates

Projects developed

Boarding Kennel

4 people after drug addiction therapy

Military Prison

15 inmates being trained as dog trainers

5 of them developing a community garden

Good News

One of them has been hired in our kennel and the other three are doing their duty in a perfect way.

None of them returned to drugs till now. Thirteen out of the fifteen inmates passed the exams related to dog training and some of them with excellent score

Conclusions

Animals are able to counter condition many situations that have been conditioned aversively in the past.
Drug addicts are more likely to leave isolation and get along in a positive way through the work with animals
Prison inmates develop better human interactions if there are common goals related to an animal welfare or training .
